Laws Whiskey House is a grain-to-glass distillery in Denver, Colorado that applies a “there are no shortcuts” philosophy to each batch of whiskey produced. Each batch is milled, cooked, fermented, distilled, and aged on-site, utilizing heirloom grains from family-owned Colorado farms. The practice of open air, on-grain fermentation captures the essence of Colorado’s terroir while the copper pot-column still produces a robust, grain-forward style of whiskey.

- ◆ Tasting Notes: Sweet grass with honey and brine on the nose, cooling notes of wild mint and fennel, followed by deeper accents of sea salt, orange tea, and brown sugar on the palate. Finishes with a rich and buttery mouth feel accompanied by tobacco notes.
- ◆ Mash Bill: 95% heirloom rye, 5% heirloom barley
- ◆ Aged over six years in new, 53 gal, charred oak barrels
- ◆ First Bottled in Bond rye whiskey in Colorado history

Meets the standards of the Bottled in Bond Act of 1897. Bottled in Bond requires that the whiskey be a product of a single season, using the grain of a single season, made by one distiller at a single distillery, and aged at least four years in a federal government-bonded warehouse. The whiskey is then cut and bottled at 100 proof (50% ABV).

Best Rye under 12 years
