Laws Whiskey House is a grain-to-glass distillery in Denver, Colorado that applies a “there are no shortcuts” philosophy to each batch of whiskey produced. Each batch is milled, cooked, fermented, distilled, and aged on-site, utilizing heirloom grains from family-owned Colorado farms. The practice of open air, on-grain fermentation captures the essence of Colorado’s terroir while the copper pot-column still produces a robust, grain-forward style of whiskey.

- ◆ Tasting Notes: Cherry cola, honey, and black currant on the nose with notes of hazelnut, mint, green mango, and serrano pepper on the palate. Finishes with a rich and buttery mouth-feel leaving lingering notes of star anise and sage.
- ◆ Mash Bill: 95% heirloom rye, 5% heirloom barley
- ◆ Aged over seven years in new, 53 gal, charred oak barrels
- ◆ First Bottled in Bond rye whiskey in Colorado history

Meets the standards of the Bottled in Bond Act of 1897. Bottled in Bond requires that the whiskey be a product of a single season, using the grain of a single season, made by one distiller at a single distillery, and aged at least four years in a federal government-bonded warehouse. The whiskey is then cut and bottled at 100 proof (50% ABV).
