Ten Percent of this special release will support organizations dedicated to conserving and protecting the Colorado River. While whiskey alone can't solve these complex issues, we're committed to doing our part.

Water is a critical and influential input in the production of whiskey throughout the entire process, whether it be in the mashing and cooking of grain, proofing of unaged spirit into the barrel, or preparation for the final pour to highlight that perfect expression.

While we understand that whiskey alone cannot resolve the complex issues surrounding water sustainability, we believe that each incremental action, however small, can play a role in helping solve the challenges we face. We are dedicated to playing our part in addressing these issues.

The Headwaters Series whiskey release by Laws Whiskey House is a commitment to raising awareness about the importance of water sustainability and supporting efforts to conserve Colorado's rivers. Through our philanthropic initiatives and dedication to adopting sustainable practices, we aim to contribute positively to the conservation of water resources for future generations, one drop at a time.

ABOUT THIS WHISKEY

- ◆ The topo map on this release's label was created by Kind Design and depicts a section of the Colorado River through Ruby Horsethief Canyon on the Western Slope of the state 39.1722° N, 108.9565° W.
- ◆ We proofed this whiskey with purified water from the Rocky Mountain-fed headwaters of the Colorado River, collected outside of Rocky Mountain National Park, to create an entirely novel bourbon that celebrates this limited release's namesake.
- ◆ Mash Bill: 60% corn, 20% heirloom wheat, 10% heirloom rye, and 10% heirloom malted barley
- ◆ Aged: 4 - 7 years in new 53 gal, charred oak barrels
